UTAH IN REVIEW - 1987

Utah concluded the 1986-87 fiscal year with a surplus of $49.3 million. This came as a surprise to many observers, who witnessed Utah finances in a state of crisis during much of the year. Among the executive and legislative actions taken to keep the 1986-87 budget in balance were the following: (1) three separate spending cuts on previously-authorized approriations, (2) a scaling down of the state workforce in order to reduce operating costs, (3) postponement or delay on the start of several capital projects, (4) enactment of a large tax increase, and (5) imposition of a special, one-time 4% income tax surcharge.

Although the Utah economy still is sluggish, the condition of state finances is somewhat better than what it was a year ago. While sales tax collections remain flat or slightly down, individual income tax receipts are well ahead of earlier estimates.

Enactment of state tax increases by the 1987 Utah Legislature met with strong resistance from the general public and led to a tax protest movement. A petition drive was started to place several tax initiatives on the 1988 general election ballot. One of the initiative measures would repeal the tax increases imposed by the 1987 Legislature and roll back state taxes to pre-1987 levels and beyond. A second initiative would place limits on the property tax and restrict growth in state and local appropriations.

It should be noted that the higher taxes imposed last year were not used to finance an expanded state government. In fact, there has been a serious effort made to downsize government operations. In addition to reducing the number of state employees, some branch offices were closed, divisions were consolidated, positions were combined, some programs were privatized, and other programs were centralized.

The 1988 Utah Legislature adopted a 1988-89 state budget totaling $2.8 billion, down slightly from the expected total for this year (1987-88). The 1988-89 budget called for no new taxes. In fact, taxpayers could get a credit in April 1989, if income tax receipts continue to come in higher than expected.

One encouraging sign for the long-term financial future is that school enrollment growth in Utah is slowing down. The year-to-year increase in 1987-88 school enrollments, for example, is only about one half of what it was in 1982-83. If present trends continue, Utah school enrollments will level off by 1993-94 and then begin to decline.

The major education problem in Utah during recent years has been the rapid enrollment growth in the public schools. Over the past ten years, school enrollments in Utah climbed by 32%, while they were dropping by 12% for the nation as a whole. Even though school expenditures in Utah have been rising faster than the U.S. average, the state lost ground with other states when funds are compared on a per pupil basis.

More than 80% of all state spending in Utah is for education, social services, and transportation. Education, of course, continues to be the number one area of state expenditures. Last year, state and local units in Utah expended $1,645,000,000 for educational purposes.

Sales taxes and income taxes account for 75% of all state taxes and nearly half of all state revenue in Utah. The property tax is a major revenue source for local governments. These three taxes produce about 82% of all state and local tax receipts in the state.

According to the U.S. Bureau of the Census, Utah's state and local tax burden was eighth highest in the nation, when measured as a percent of personal income. Among the major taxes, Utah was significantly above the regional and national averages in its use of the income tax and the sales tax and about average in its use of the property tax. The tax changes enacted by the 1987 Utah Legislature may make Utah rank even higher in its overall tax burden.

The high tax burden in Utah is a reflection of the heavy school load and the relatively low personal income in the state. Utah has one of the lowest per capita incomes in the nation--nearly 27% below the U.S. average. A major factor in Utah's low per capita income, of course, is that the state has an unusually large proportion of nonincome-producing children. Utah has more children in relation to its adult population than any other state in the nation. When personal income is related only to the adult population, Utah is approximately 11% under the U.S. average and about 5% below the Mountain States average.

* A small fraction of Park City is in Wasatch County. All sales are reported in Summit County.

NOTE: Above figures are based on the sales tax revenues that are allocated to local units during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1987. Since there is a delay in remitting sales tax collections to the State Tax Commission, the data actually reflects business operations during the 12 month period ended March 31, 1987. Sales tax allocations to local units are amounts distributed after deduction of administrative expenses by the State Tax Commission. Gross taxable sales includes or reflects use tax collections as well as sales tax collections.

Compiled by UTAH FOUNDATION from records of the Utah State Tax Commission.

* Because of the overlapping boundaries of the various special districts in the state, more than one tax rate may apply within a municipality or school district. For example, 30 different overall tax rates are applied within Ogden City and 17 different rates are found in Salt Lake City. Actually, there are 145 different taxing areas in Salt Lake County, 205 in Weber County, and 70 in Davis County. In the preceding county tabulations, the different taxing areas are designated by one or more code letters following the name of the municipality or school district. Each code letter refers to some special taxing district which imposes or is authorized to impose a tax within the district. Thus, "Weber Schools - A,B,D,J,K,ee" refers to the taxing area in the Weber School District (outside of any incorporated city or town) which is in the Weber Basin Water District (A), Central Weber Sewer District (B), Ben Lomond Cemetery District (D), the Bona Vista Water District (J), the Weber County Mosquito District (K), and Weber County Fire Protection District #4 (ee). Of course, in addition to these taxing district's tax rates, the countywide rates for schools and county purposes are applied in the described taxing area.
